INVENTOR - 30's

Hi, I'm the father of anti-homeless architecture. Before we go any further, I must clarify, NOT anti-homelessNESS architecture. Anti-homeLESS architecture. I'll give you a moment.

You know that bar in the middle of a bench that stops you from lying down?

(He nods and points to himself)

That one inhumane design I built rotted me to my core and led me down a path of incredibly successful pieces.

I'm known in all sectors of Hell for creations such as, "Unnecessarily Sharp Fence" or "Pigeon Spikes, but for People."

Now, I'm back with a head full of ideas and a heart full of hate to talk about the next best pieces in anti-homeless architecture.

Introducing: "Sidewalk Knife." If someone walking by YOUR BUSINESS...lingers in one spot for more than ten minutes, a steak knife emerges from the concrete and starts slashing at the perpetrator's Achilles tendon, safely luring them away from the area.

Now, we recognize that means these "people" won't have a place to go. Not true. I have poured blood, sweat, and tears into our new catch-and-release program. We raised just enough to purchase a modest section of the grand canyon where they can roam free.

(He gets choked up and it triggers something.)

(For a brief moment, he looks miserable. It's as if his soul is still inside his body, but it can't quite make it past the hollow shell of the man he has become.)

Thank you.

(Blackout)
